

Leandro's professional career in the transportation industry began in 1995, where he held several leadership roles. Leandro joined Yourway, the Biopharma Services Company, in 2018 as the SVP of Corporate Development, with overall leadership responsibility for Yourway's global business operations. Under his leadership, Yourway has solidified and expanded its global presence while consistently experiencing yearly double-digit growth.

Prior to joining Yourway, Leandro spent his career in the publicly traded sector, holding leadership roles at Brink's and American Airlines with responsibilities for business operations, including commercial planning, mergers and acquisitions, labor negotiations, regulatory compliance, airport operations, and finance.

Leandro is recognized in the life sciences industry for leading several legacy initiatives, including turning Miami International Airport into the first recognized pharma hub airport in the Americas. He is engaged in various global initiatives to promote trade, pharmaceutical supply chain security, and patient safety. Leandro is a frequent lecturer at global conferences hosted by organizations such as IATA, TIACA, World Trade Center, Cargo Facts, Healthcare Distribution Alliance, and the US Department of Commerce.

Leandro studied Law at the "Universidade Estadual do Rio de Janeiro," Public Policy and Organizational Communications at the University of Miami and completed his Executive Leadership education at Cornell.
